

- (B) You've accurately summarized the key points. The "HAS PHONE" relationship in a database can become redundant when phone numbers are stored separately, each person has only one phone number, or when the relationship is rarely used. In cases where each individual has a unique phone number stored separately, the "HAS PHONE" relationship may not be necessary, as a single "Phone" entity would not be effective.